

List of Entities with Major Greenhouse Gas Emissions in Washington State

The following list was prepared based on the assumptions noted below. The list is not a determination of entities that will be ultimately covered by the Carbon Pollution Accountability Act.

Entities subject to the Carbon Pollution Accountability Act will be required to report their greenhouse gas emissions on an annual basis. Entities with emissions equal to or exceeding 25,000 metric tons of carbon dioxide equivalent in any calendar year from 2012 through 2014 will be covered by the Act (there are a few exemptions).

In 2008, the Legislature required reporting of greenhouse gas (GHG) emissions from facilities and transportation fuel suppliers that emit 10,000 metric tons carbon of dioxide equivalents (MT CO2e) or more in Washington per year. The reporting data were submitted, to the Department of Ecology, in 2012 and 2013.

To evaluate the scope and size of the program, Ecology reviewed greenhouse gas reporting data from 2012 and 2013¹ from Facilities and Transportation Fuel Suppliers to identify facilities with emissions equal to or exceeding 25,000 MTCO₂e. These facilities are on the list below.

Presently there are gaps in our GHG reporting program and there are a few entities that are not required to report which will be required to report under the bill (e.g., residential heating fuel, and imported electricity). Ecology used different types of information to identify a number of entities with emissions above the threshold.

For natural gas local distribution companies (LDCs), Ecology used greenhouse gas reporting data submitted² to EPA. For transportation fuel, Ecology used the Department of Licensing fuel tax information. For electricity importers, in addition to the three investor owned utilities, Ecology assumed that electricity marketers active on the West Coast may have an emissions footprint that would put them in the program in the future.

It is important to note that we expect that additional entities, not included in the list, could be covered by the program.
